Successful jungle operations require special tactics, techniques and procedures, as well as extensive practical training in order to survive and operate in dense tropical and sub-tropical vegetation. TridentCMG Instructors possess extensive training and experience in conducting guerilla warfare in a jungle environment, and in teaching Jungle Warfare to client militaries around the world. In the TridentCMG Jungle Warfare Course soldiers are taught commonsense tips on how to operate and survive in the jungle, to eat and sleep like guerrillas, and strike silently and violently like guerrillas. They will learn how to operate in small teams, how to gather information and how to establish an intelligence network. They will learn to study the patterns of their adversaries to determine their modus operandi, sanctuaries and lines of communication. And they will learn how to maintain the element of surprise, select ambush sites, and observe fire discipline until engagement to destroy their targets. Students completing the course will be capable of surviving in a jungle environment as well as planning and conducting various types of military operations therein.
